Leader of the Year 2008 Awards

The "Leader of the Year 2008 Awards" was presented at the Hong Kong Sing Tao Daily 70th Anniversary Gala Dinner on March 29 in the Grand Hyatt Hong Kong. In the Community/Public Affairs category, the winner was To Chung, founder of the Chi Heng Foundation. Chung received the award from Dr. Leong Che-hung, Chairman of the Hong Kong AIDS Foundation.

"To quit his banking career at the peak of the stock market boom and dedicate his life to improving the lot of AIDS-affected children in the mainland sets an admirable example for youngsters," said Dr. Raymond Ch'ien, Chairman of the Hong Kong MTR Corporation and a panel judge. He believes Chung's demonstration of "money isn't everything" and courage to do the right thing in the face of hostility and adversity can act as a beacon for young people who have lost their bearings in the current economic crisis.

Mr. Andrew Leung, Chairman of the Hong Kong Productivity Council and a panel judge, also commended Chung's advocacy of education and prevention of acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS) in China, especially for orphans who have lost their parents to the disease.

Mr. Leung urged youngsters not to crave material items.

Mirroring Chung, they should spare some time to contribute to society and strive to achieve their aspirations. 福

Chi Heng Initiatives in Southwest China

Chi Heng has been helping AIDS impacted children in Yunnan and Guangxi since 2006, mainly through cooperation with local entities. In March, Chi Heng's office in Kunming went into operation, marking a milestone in its work in the Southwest. The office was sponsored by the Kunming Fulin Tang Pharmaceutical Company Limited, Member of New World Group. The office has two main objectives. First, offer help to the AIDS impacted children. Up to Spring 2009, Chi Heng has helped over 200 children in this area. Second, work on earthquake relief in Sichuan. In the summer of 2008, the villagers welcomed the help offered by over 20 university students supported by Chi Heng. A number of university students visited the earthquake impacted area again right before the Chinese New Year in 2009 to disburse additional relief supplies. Chi Heng is planning another visit this summer to convey care and support to the villagers. 福

Care for AIDS Orphans, Celebrate Children's Day

"Care for AIDS Orphans, Celebrate Children's Day" was the theme for the awareness raising activities organized by Chi Heng in Beijing, Shanghai and Guangzhou around the World AIDS Orphans Day on May 7 and the Children's Day on June 1. Exhibition of drawings by AIDS orphans, talks and debates were held in participating corporations and high schools. The events were supported by Beidu Charity and Sohu Charity.

In Beijing, exhibition of drawings and talks were held at the Zhaolin Group and the KFC store in Wanwei, as well as the Communication University of China (CUC), Renmin University of China (RUC) and Peking University Health Science Center (PUHSC). In conjunction with the exhibition, a book donation drive took place in the CUC and the RUC to benefit the AIDS orphans in the rural area. Chung To gave talks in RUC and PUHSC on the current status of AIDS orphans.

A debate competition was the main activity in Shanghai. Students from the Shanghai International Studies University (SISU) and Fudan University had a vigorous debate on "the privacy right of AIDS patients vs. the public's right to know", during which Chung served as a judge. SISU was declared the winner.

In Guangzhou, "Care for AIDS Orphans" was the theme for the activities held at the Sun Yat-Sen University. Original drawings by AIDS orphans supported by Chi Heng went on exhibition. The lively paintings attracted many student visitors, many of whom used paper provided to make stars, cranes and red ribbons. They also posted their creation on the "Wall of Care" to convey their well wishes for the AIDS orphans. Many others wrote words of encouragement to the AIDS orphans on the "Wall of Care".

benefiting Chi Heng. An estimated 4,000 people visited the exhibition during the 5 day event, some purchased the book, ordered photographs as gifts or to take home a beautiful piece of work while supporting a worthy cause.

Comprised of more than 100 images, "Children of China" is a photographic journey that captures the allure and beauty of China through the eyes and faces of its children. The author Alethea

Gold, a renowned Australian children's stylist, had a dream of being in China which she coincidentally shared with a friend and fashion photographer Luca Zordan, and the vision turned into an unexpected life-changing reality. "I hadn't even been to China," says Gold, "and nor had Luca. That we both dreamt of being among children there seemed more than pure happenstance – it was as if it was our destiny."

"Soon after I heard of the Oscar-nominated documentary "Blood of Yingzhou District" about peasants in central China who sold their blood for food money. Many of them became infected with HIV. As a result, many children became orphans and I suddenly realised that our true destiny was to help these children," said Alethea.

Limited edition of the 28 photographs exhibited and the book is still available, with all net proceeds benefiting Chi Heng. For more details please visit www.chfaiidsorphans.com,

"Celebrate your Happiness, Find your Blessings" Charity Dinner

"Celebrate your Happiness, Find your Blessings" is a charity dinner series organized by food critic Ms. Doreen Leung who is a Chi Heng volunteer. Comedians entertained dinner guests while they enjoy the special menu with almond as the main ingredient for the six course meal from appetizer to desert. The menu was designed by chef Chow Kuen Chung, who won the Japan Iron Chef competition, and Doreen Leung.

The dinner was held at the Super Star seafood restaurant in Wan Chai, Hong Kong, with sponsorship from the restaurant and Health Smart Limited. Five dinner gatherings had been held from February to July this year, with the next one planned for August 14. Seats are limited as the menu requires much work in the kitchen.

Performances and sharing from Dr. Maria Lee, Ms. Maria Chung, Mr. Lam Chiu Wing, Mr. Lai Man Cheuk and Mr. Choy Tsz Kin ensured that laughter, inspiration and good food were enjoyed by everyone. A joyful evening became the best reward to the kind supporters of Chi Heng.

While it takes a lot of work to organize each gathering, dinner organizer Doreen Leung welcomes the opportunity for additional events, as many people have come to know Chi Heng through this event. Interested parties may call Ms Lee at (852) 2891 0874 or email leungdoreen@gmail.com.

"Student can Help 2009" Charity Concert

Attended by over 200 students, the theme for the event was "First AIDS", intending to convey hope and support to the AIDS orphans through music. Three bands formed by students from various universities in HK together with the guest band "Mister" performed singing and music to express love and care.

The concert was jointly organized by the Community College of City University, City University of Hong Kong and Chi Heng, with sponsorship from the Sedan Chair Charities Fund. All ticket sales proceeds benefited Chi Heng.

Falling in Love with Fuyang

Shortly after arriving at the Chi Heng office in Fuyang, China, volunteers from Hong Kong and Canada met two young staff there. They were Ping and Xiaodai. Both of their parents were infected with AIDS in selling blood. They were sponsored by Chi Heng for their education and both of them have already graduated from university. Xiaodai now has his own family with a lovely baby boy. Both of them have a wonderful change in their lives after receiving the support from Chi Heng.

Being thankful and grateful to Chi Heng, Ping and Xiaodai decided to work in Chi Heng. With their personal experience, they know that they can help and understand those children impacted by AIDS. Fuyang office currently has 4 full-time staff and is helping over 1500 children in the Fuyang area.

During one of the home visits, we met a teenage girl call Wai. Both of her parents have contracted AIDS, and unfortunately she has also been infected with AIDS at birth. A beautiful girl dressed in pink, she spoke softly and with tears in her eyes. We learned that she and her mother were discriminated by students at school, and even by her grand-mother and uncles and aunties at home. Ping and the volunteers from Canada tried to encourage her and to cheer her up, however she could not stop her tears. Every drop of her tears told us that we (volunteers) need to work harder and further, to give our love and to support more kids like her in China, so that all of them can live joyfully and with self esteem.

With the support from Chi Heng, the children receive not just education, but also unconditional love and care from Chung To, from the staff and the volunteers. Being loved, the children also learn to love and help others in a similar situation. We are pleased to see that love has been passed on to the children, like Ping and Xiaodai, and they decided to come back to help other children. Together we build a better future with love and care for these 8000+ children and families impacted by AIDS across China.

Thank you Chi Heng and Chung To for the amazing works and unconditional love to families impacted by AIDS.

Voice from our staff

Me and Chi Heng

△ Wu Huawei

Chi Heng has financed me throughout my secondary school and university studies. Even to this day, Chi Heng still plays a large part in my life, as I am now one of their employees. I decided to work for Chi Heng not just because I have been deeply moved by their mission, but also because I felt compelled to assist because of my conscience.

Both of my parents were victims of AIDS. During the winter of 2002, my father passed away. My world collapsed around me and I was utterly devastated and helpless. I decided to leave school and start work to ease the burden on my family, but I was eventually persuaded to go back home by my mother.

One day by chance, I came into contact with the Chi Heng Foundation. At that time, I did not believe that any organization would pay for school fees without asking for anything in return (perhaps I had just never come across any charitable organizations before). In the end, I decided to believe in this faint glimmer of hope and I gave it a try. In 2004, when I was still unable to pay any school fees, Chi Heng transferred one year's worth of school fees to my bank account. My tuition fees were transferred promptly to me during each of my three years at university. Only then did I finally realize that Chi Heng was there to help us. It felt like someone was making my wishes come true, and this person was Mr Chung To.

I have decided to become a part of Chi Heng because I know that there are many more children out there with a similar background and are unable to go to school. I want to help them; I do not want to see the helplessness in their eyes and I cannot stand knowing that these children, due to the lack of education opportunities, are being exploited by the others. I am there to encourage and help these children who suffered the pain of having their family member(s) die of AIDS. I want to tell them that even though those times bring us unbearable suffering, we do not need to be afraid - we still have Chi Heng, there still are people who care about us like Mr Chung To. He will encourage and support us until we are able to enjoy our own successes.

My role in Chi Heng not only involves the distribution of school fees, but also includes connecting with the children. I hope I could be involved in running social enterprises to benefit these children and provide financial support to their studies. My workload is often heavy and my business trips can take up to 20 days each month. My salary is not high but at the end of the day, I am a happy person because I know that I am doing something extremely worthwhile. I want to help those children with their school fees as quickly as possible, so that their lives are not squandered because of our delay. I do not want these children to suffer any more.

Finally, I would like to say:

Life does not believe in tears, fate does not tolerate the weak!

I struggle yet I am happy!

Thoughts on my trip to Hong Kong

I have heard much about Hong Kong, but the place itself has always seemed like a dream to me. Even though I have watched many television reports about it, I have not been able to experience its delights in person. With the help of Uncle To and other uncles and aunts at Chi Heng, I was fortunate enough to visit Hong Kong this time. I was able to experience the beauty of the place and have a taste for the optimistic attitude of the Hong Kong people.

During my few days there, I had the opportunity to see how people in Hong Kong organize their daily lives. They have a keen sense of timing and every minute of their time is put to good use. Many students on the Mainland do not make good use of their time. During their free time, some students will go shopping or go to sleep, and others will play computer games until the middle of the night, waking up only at noon the next day for lunch...in this type of environment, even hard-working people will easily become lazy.

People in Hong Kong are very civilized and polite. I didn't see seen any rubbish on the streets, nor do people smoke whilst walking. They say "hello" and "thank you" all the time, and always make me feel at ease. When I asked for directions, they showed me the way enthusiastically - some of them even offered to take me there, for which I was extremely grateful!

Auntie Lee was with us throughout our time in Hong Kong and she also organized our daily schedule. She took us to the venue of all the activities and we went sightseeing together. She also gave us many insights on her philosophies of life. Here I would like to share a few of the things she taught us:

1. Communicate more with other people. Do not be prejudiced in your views because of the person's background. Look for opportunities to communicate and learn from people from all walks of life.

2. Everyone has a place in the circle of life. This means everyone has his/her own place/position in life, but the ideal place in life cannot be attained without any effort. Your own success can only be obtained through your own efforts.

3. Be strict with yourself and be courteous - it is more important to set high standards for yourself than for the others.

4. Be considerate and do not just think about yourself.

5. Think before you act, do not follow the others blindly.

I will always keep the above words in my heart.

Amongst all of the activities that I took part in during my time in Hong Kong, the most unforgettable one was the marathon. It was the first time I have ever run with so many people. As I was not used to running such a long distance, I felt a little nervous before the game, though my results proved that it was unnecessary. When I saw the runners taking over one another or being taken over by the others, I stopped worrying - I realized that it was not the end result that was important. The key to this event was participation and the spirit. Then I felt much relaxed and when I finished the 10km run, I was extremely excited and had a huge sense of accomplishment.

At this moment, I keep recalling the kindness, gentleness and intelligence on Uncle To's face! I would like to thank our most loved and respected Uncle To once again. It is because of him, that 8,000 of us - children in the Mainland have found happiness and that so many unfortunate families have found hope. His persistency, hard work and untiring efforts have given hope to many people. We love you, Uncle To! I will work hard to repay your kindness and to contribute to the society. Thank you!

The Story Between Me and Chi Heng

The beginning of the 21st century marked my entry into a new career - an official retiree. I searched for meaningful voluntary work for five long years but failed because of my insistence on one thing - to be rewarded. Is this improper? A volunteer is only to give and never to take. Well, not so, since volunteer work without reward is boring or even non-productive. Here, of course I don't mean monetary but spiritual reward (or self satisfaction). I can share with you my views on this if my editor still allows me some space in the next newsletter.

Then, miraculously, I found Chi Heng Foundation and have since experienced a truly unique, enlightening journey with juicy rewards.

In early 2005, my friend in Canada forwarded me an article written by Chung TO, founder of Chi Heng and a Harvard MBA who left a highly paid investment banking career to devote his time to AIDS impacted orphans in China. The story was extremely touching and gave us a couple of sleepless nights. My wife Dora and I called Chung up and invited him for a meeting to find out how true his story was. In the meeting, we heard more amazing stories from him. Yet we were somehow half hearted because those narrations were simply too sad to be real.

We laid dormant until August 2005 when our inner voice guided us to call Chung again and asked if we could follow him on one of his field visits to the affected villages. He replied with a kind and welcome tone that his next trip was scheduled for the following week. Excitedly, we purchased two air tickets at the spur of the moment and off we went - to Henan for the first time.

The journey totally captivated us and changed our impression of Chung and the under-privileged AIDS-impacted orphans.

Firstly, we responded awkwardly during our maiden acquaintance with the AIDS impacted children. We are still embarrassed about our ignorance whenever we look back. On the other hand, these young kids jumped at the sight of Chung, hugged him and fondly chanted 'TO Su Su (Uncle)'. This particular scene led us to understand that Chung did devote lots and lots of his time, effort, love, passion, care, and so on with these children.

Secondly, we stayed in one star hotel with cockroaches loitering around. It was clear evidence that Chi Heng is an NGO with its expenditure strictly controlled.

Thirdly, end of August was just a few days before new school term commenced. One of Chung's routines was to personally interview each and every first year university student applying for scholarship from Chi Heng. He used a fairly detailed marking system. Only qualified applications were approved. This showed his dedication and sophistication in managing the NGO's funds.

Fourthly, even when an applicant passed all criteria, Chung would not hand out 100% of the required fees. Usually he endorsed around 60-70% and requested him/her to make up the balance from other means, e.g. bank/school loans, tutoring services, part time jobs, etc. This demonstrated Chung's way of treating and respecting the student that he/she was a grown-up and capable of independently looking after him/herself. Clearly this helped to build the student's self esteem and confidence.

Fifthly, each approved sum was remitted directly into the bank account of the applicant and subsequently verified against the receipt issued by the university. This certainly relieved our biggest worry that part of the raised fund is being pocketed by middle persons.

In short, Chi Heng is more than a charity organization. It is home to many orphans who have unfortunately lost their parents; its parental loving and caring style let many under-privileged feel a sense of belonging and most importantly 'hope for the future'.

As a result of our revised comprehension of Chung and Chi Heng, Dora and I started lending our hands as volunteers and up till now have not regretted our decision because we have been rewarded - with tremendous satisfaction and pride.

Finally, we take this corner to appeal to our readers that if you have faith in what I said above and believe you are interested, committed, ambitious and loyal, you are always welcome to join our small yet joyous volunteer team, and I would like to hear from you through Chi Heng.

About Us

The Chi Heng Foundation is a charity registered and based in Hong Kong. Since 2002, CHF's AIDS Orphan Project has provided education and care to 8,000 AIDS-impacted children across central China. A mere HK$ 250 can pay for one child's primary schooling for an entire year
